To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate. He has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W.
Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified.
Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publishers.
Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

A CARD.

THE subscriber begs leave to say to members of Congress and others, that he has several good rooms which he will let on accommodating terms, either furnished or unfurnished, located on the South side of Pennsylvania avenue, between 9th and 10th streets, and equidistant between the Capitol and the public offices. I have also two of the best cellars in the city, which I will rent in part or the whole, or receive goods on storage.
This is a good opportunity for butchers or market people.

THE WATERMAN'S ARMS.

A TALE OF DOVER.
BY EDWARD F. WELD.

Continued.

"Keep an eye to her, some one, my eyes are sightless!" he cried; "God see her safe over the third sea and I am a father yet!"

The dimmed eye of the old man was fixed seaward, and in the agony of his thoughts he stood alone unseeing and unconscious of every thing except the danger of his boy. The last wave had shattered the pier, and the light house had rocked upon its foundation. Those that were about him had retreated for safety, together with the keeper of the light. Had they known his situation they would have dragged him with them. The brightness of the light fully painted the horrors of a scene beyond description. Each sea had been but a pig-my compared with the one fast approaching—and still at his dangerous post stood the master, issuing words of cheer lost in the tempest, to the last.

The sea broke, and with its roar was heard the cracking of timber. No light shone upon its returning path—for light house, pier head, and master were swept away by its fury; and just then was heard the faint boom of the signal gun at sea, as if in requiem of him who had oft obeyed its summons. "But his hour was not yet."

The agents of the Humane Society who had lighted the path of boatmen had not left the pier. The dread tale was spread as if by magic, and they were joined by others, and the energies of all were directed to the saving of life, as more than one was supposed to be in jeopardy. For some moments it bade fair to be a fruitless search, and when all were despondent a shout of joy relieved all hearts. Next to dead, and sadly bruised, the master was found entangled in the drifting wreck of the light house, his right hand still retaining the trumpet.
So powerful had been his grasp that the metal had yielded to the clutch of his fingers.

Restoratives were resorted to with success, and in one short hour, he that left the Waterman's Arms, and braved the storms though nerved with iron, was carried thither a fitting type of mortality and its weakness. The voice that mocked the din of the tempest breathed but a dying man's whisper, its tone of stern command a babe's entreaty—whose only utterance was "my boy—my boy."

To those who assumed the task of watchers, the hours of that night passed but slowly away. The gale had subsided, and the faint blast, with subdued moan, seemed to steal through the air as if wearied with its past violence.

Stretched upon a field-bed before the fire lay the body of the master, in a feverish slumber, but the sudden start, convulsive grasp, disturbed breathing, broken and faint exclamation, spoke of the toil and agony of a mind that knew no rest. The hand dropped, the lip was still, and the convul-sive twitching of the countenance ceased, and as the pale light flickered over the pallid face, the anxious attendant knelt in awfully still anxiety, to ascertain whether the master was breathing or dead. It was sleep—the rest so long denied, and so much needed, was his. Oblivion again yielded to busy imaginations, and happy thoughts and pleasing delusions portrayed themselves in smiles on his face like those of infancy.
"God bless thee both," he muttered, "you were ever my only child, my own dear boy, will she be the old man's daughter?
God bless her!" and the hands were clasped, and the lips moved in prayer.

Nor did he pray alone. The hour, the scene, the monotonous tick of the clock, the faint sob of the heart broken wife in the room adjoining, combined to awake feelings in the heart of the rude sailor that prayer alone could soothe, and orisons as devout as sinful man may utter, arose from them that knelt by his bedside.

The outward form of visible devotion was at an end, yet their thoughts, of themselves, were silent prayers, and grouped around the sick man's couch, in superstitious dread they regarded the hands of the clock, which were fast drawing toward the hour when the tide would be at its lowest ebb; an hour, as they supposed, which would bring death or recovery to their companion.

Long as had seemed each moment, the dread hour was past, and their fellow-laborer, friend, and leader slept soundly and calmly. Nature herself was at rest, and the moon forced her way through the broken clouds, and her light stole through the casement and decked the floor with shadows. The expiring candle was replaced, the fire renewed, and hope again reigned in the breasts of all. Poor Alice! what a change for her. Sleep was hers at last: sleep from pure exhaustion. Her cheek rivalled the pillow whereon it lay in whiteness, hours had been years, and each had left its trace with her. The hand that so gracefully rested upon her breast held a lover's memento, a braided lock of his hair.
Secretly they had loved, and in secret they had pledged themselves to each other; and this token had been hidden near her heart for months. The bridal ring graced her finger. Now, as she wore the one she dared to show the other. Every warm and tender feeling that woman may or does know had been nourished and treasured, to lavish on him whom she had barely time to claim ere he was lost to her.

Her kind friend the hostess, as she sat by her bed-side, slept also. The Bible lay open upon the stand near by, and recorded upon its blank leaf was her marriage, the ink barely dry, and the page bearing evidence in its stain of recent tears. They were not idly shed, for in the same moment she had been pronounced a wife she became a widow.

CHAPTER III.

The boat's crew, whose perilous feat we attempted to describe, escaped but one danger to be exposed to another. They gained an offing in safety; and while laboring to reach those in distress, their boat came in contact with a storm driven barque; the shock staving and upsetting her. But, though broken, from her peculiar construction she righted, still buoyant, and but one of her crew—that one the master's son—was missing. The survivors succeeded in preserving their distance from the shore until daylight authorized them in the attempt at landing, which was effected with safety. To the father and wife the tale they bore was indeed heart-rending. The former became bereft of reason—the latter but barely escaped death. Upon her recovery, her care and time were wholly devoted to the father of her husband.

Months sped. The tale of woe, from being oft narrated, in a measure lost its horrors by familiarity, and time was fast erasing it from the minds of many. Not so with Alice; with the devotion of her sex she was to be seen in sunshine and storm, robed in the habiliments of the widow, guiding the footsteps and supporting the tottering frame of a childish old man, who daily climbed to the lookout upon the cliffs, where, in pleasant weather, he would sit for hours watching with his glass the motion of passing vessels.

(To be concluded.)

Leather, Leather, Leather.

THE subscriber, Thos. G. Ford, returns his thanks to his friends and the consumers of Leather in general, for the liberal patronage he has received since he opened his Leather and Currying store, on the corner of 7th and G streets.— He would respectfully inform them that he has now a full assortment of his own finish on hand,

Language and Literature.

HERMAN HAUPT, A. M., Professor of Mathematics.
WM. HENRY HARRISON, A. B., Assistant Professor of Languages.

DAVID GILBERT, M. D., Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology.

Rev. J. G. MORRIS, D. D., Lecturer on Zoology.
WM. ALBAUGH, A. M., Tutor and Teacher in Preparatory Department.

H. R. GEIGER, Teacher of Writing.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $2 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 23d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the Institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baughman and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.

resources of the country and the world, and illustrate the various topics bearing upon Commerce and Commercial Literature.

It has been, and will continue to be, the aim of the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants' Magazine, to avoid everything of a party, political, or sectional bias or bearing, in the conduct of the work—opening its pages to the free and fair discussion of antagonistic doctrines connected with the great interests of Commerce, Agriculture, Manufactures and the Currency.
